Welcome!

On behalf of the Coalition for Juvenile Justice (CJJ) Executive Board, Council of State Advisory Groups (SAGs), members, staff, and allies, we welcome you to our 2018 Annual Conference, "At the Intersections: How Federal, State, and Local Partners Can Work Together to Improve Juvenile Justice." Our goal for you is to leave this conference well-informed, motivated, and connected with colleagues from across the country.

This year's conference will focus on the latest research, developments, opportunities, and challenges facing our field today. CJJ has assembled exciting panels, speakers, and workshops that will delve into key emerging issues, how practitioners and stakeholders can use new research to improve outcomes for youth, and how emerging trends will impact the core work of juvenile justice agencies and stakeholders.

We extend our deep appreciation to the thoughtful and hardworking members and partners who helped plan this conference. Our gratitude goes out to the CJJ Government Relations Committee for organizing CJJ's Annual Hill Day, to the CJJ Executive Board and Nominating Committee for organizing the elections and Council of SAGs Meeting, and to the Workshop Review Committee for selecting dynamic sessions and table talks for conference attendees.

Please be sure to join colleagues and friends as we honor three exceptional individuals during Thursday's Awards Breakfast. Each year, CJJ receives an abundance of superb nominees and we appreciate the careful and difficult decisions made by the awards review committees in selecting these worthy recipients of CJJ's highest honors.

The 2018 CJJ Annual Conference would not be possible without our dedicated sponsors. CJJ is grateful to these individuals and organizations for their generous contributions. We would particularly like to thank the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention and the Pew Charitable Trusts for their generous support. A full list of conference supporters is available at the back of this program.

Sincerely,

Judge Steven Teske National Chair

A. Does Your Policy Promote Racial and Ethnic Equity?

How can you ensure that policies are furthering racial and ethnic equity? In this highly interactive workshop, participants will learn what the research on implicit bias teaches us about how to craft racially-equitable policy proposals and what questions to ask as we conduct an assessment of whether a policy is furthering race equity or not. Participants will engage in large and small group exercises to analyze state policy proposals to determine whether or not they further race equi-

B. Mapping the Landscape of Juvenile Court Policies to Support Youth Housing Stability

Youth involved in the justice system have disproportionate rates of housing instability compared to youth in the general population. However, the mechanisms of how the justice system interacts with homelessness, and what to do about it, are only generally understood and lack the specificity needed for courts to undertake policy and practice reforms. This presentation reports on early findings from a study being conducted in Washington State to map this landscape in order to develop plans for increasing housing stability in two juvenile courts as a model for other sites. This mixed method study uses qualitative data from community coalition workgroups, juvenile court file review, and state-level data to identify associations between youth psychosocial indicators of risk and homelessness. Findings will shed light on practical efforts courts can take to improve connections for supporting youth housing, including screening/assessment at key decision points, and strengthening community connections.

C. Girls In the Juvenile Justice System

Over the last decade, successful reforms have reduced the number of youth in juvenile custody by 50 percent nationwide — largely by sharply reducing confinement for low-risk behavior. Despite this decrease, girls' incarceration is still declining at a slower rate than boys', with a vast — majority of girls' incarcerations resulting from behavior that poses no public safety risk. The juvenile justice field systematically lacks — alternatives to incarceration that would support girls in their communities and keep girls out of custody for nonviolent, low-risk offenses. — Addressing these disparities is a particularly urgent need for girls of color and LGBT/gender nonconforming (GNC) youth who disproportionately bear the burdens of incarceration.

D. How State Advisory Groups (SAGs) Can Effectively Support Their State's Compliance With the Four Core Requirements

SAG members play an important role in supporting the efforts of their Designated State Agency (DSA) in achieving and maintaining compliance with the four core requirements of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act (JJDPA). In this session, participants will learn key strategies for partnering with their DSA staff including becoming an expert on each of the four core requirements, participating in monitoring visits to detention facilities, and educating key stakeholders about the JJDPA and the impact of compliance.

DMC Coordinators and CJJ Ethnic and Cultural Diversity Committee Joint Business Meeting

All DMC Coordinators and Ethnic and Cultural Diversity Committee members are invited to attend this joint meeting. It will serve as a forum for those who work on reducing Disproportionate Minority Contact to network, share resources, and discuss emerging issues.

The Ethnic and Cultural Diversity Committee ensures that the diversity of race, culture, and ethnicity of youth in the juvenile justice system remains foremost in the minds of CJJ members. Committee members develop juvenile justice system reforms that generate policies and services to resolve disproportionate minority contact (DMC) and racial/ethnic disparities in the juvenile justice system. The committee acts as an advisor to CJJ on all ethnic and cultural issues.

Educating detained youth and ensuring successful transition into community schools is an equity issue. To improve educational outcomes in juvenile justice facilities, we must develop the capacity to recognize obstacles embedded within the overlap of racial and ethnic dispari-

LGBTQ+ (SOGIE), and special education. This workshop will address ties, promising practices used to address these intersectionalities when providing wraparound services to re-enroll and re-engage students in most appropriate educational environment.

B. Framing A Positive Youth Development Approach to Juvenile Crime Prevention

This session will build skills in planning juvenile crime prevention and juvenile justice programs through a positive youth development (PYD) approach. This approach is based on developing a program theory of action that connects youth criminogenic factors with corresponding resiliency factors identified in youth development literature. A special emphasis is placed on creating an effective development context for youth. The workshop will be presented in an interactive format with an ultimate focus on practical implications.

C. If Your Community Puts Cops in Schools, How Do You Do It Right?

Communities around the U.S. are trying to figure out, "If we have a School Resource Officer (SRO) in our schools, how do we do it right?" This session — presented by a national leader on school-law enforcement partnerships — tackles the tough issues using hands-on exercises and a checklist approach. This interactive session will include the proper roles of SROs, stronger MOUs, and how to select and train SROs so that they can divert youth from justice involvement.

D. Strategies for Effectively Engaging Youth State Advisory Group Members

This session is designed to provide participants with knowledge and strategies to engage youth participants in SAGs. State Advisory Groups—are required to have at least one fifth of their members be under the age—of twenty-four at the time of appointment. The session is on identifying recruitment opportunities, implementing strategies to increase retention, building mutually beneficial relationships, and developing a continuum of leadership opportunities for young adults on the SAG. Speakers, including current youth SAG leaders, will work together to deliver an interactive session and provide participants with tools to build, nurture, and sustain a youth voice within their SAG.
